

Michelle A. Osborne, Ph.D.

Director of Institutional Effectiveness

Editor in Chief, Journal of Military Conflict Transformation

Air Force Negotiation Center (AFNC)

Areas of Expertise:

Michelle A. Osborne currently serves as the Director of Institutional Effectiveness for the Air Force Negotiation Center, as well as the Editor in Chief for the center’s leading publication, The Journal of Military Conflict Transformation.

Before joining the team in January of 2019, Dr. Osborne served as the Program Manager of Research and Analytics for the Army’s Soldier for Life (SFL) and Soldier for Life - Transition Assistance Program (SFL-TAP), where she provided multiple offices with critical information needed to inform Army Senior Leaders in the Pentagon including the Secretary of the Army, Undersecretary of the Army, and the Army G-1 (4-Star General). During her time with SFL she was able to make meaningful contributions to policy decisions that impacted the Total Army (Active, National Guard, and Army Reserve).

Dr. Osborne has also held key positions in Washington, D. C., where she served as an advocate and advisor to the community at large as it pertains to Veteran and Military Spouse hiring, retention, and licensing.

Education and Training

Ph.D., Psychology, Walden University	2016
M.S., Psychology, Walden University	2013
B.S., Human Biology; Molecular & Cellular Biology, Boise State University	2009
Certificate - Project Management	2018