Grant and Awards

- 2022 NSF Engines: Type-2 “RISE Engine - Regenerative Innovation for Sustainability and Equity in Community Development.”
PI: Lina Svedin, Professor, Political Science; Co-PIs: Tabitha Benney, Associate Professor, Political Science, University of Utah, Sarah Hinnens, Associate Professor (Clinical), City and Metropolitan Planning, University of Utah Shannon Jones, Assistant Professor (Clinical), Nutrition & Integrative Physiology, University of Utah Jennifer Weidhaas, Associate Professor, Civil and Environmental Engineering, University of Utah. The application had a network of approx. 55 public, private and nonprofit sector leaders, community organizers, innovators, entrepreneurs, researchers, educators, and decision-makers engaged and supporting the first phase. Funding source: NSF Regional Innovation Engines Program, Tier 2 Engine, Directorate for Technology, Innovation and Partnerships, Division of Innovation and Technology Ecosystems. Interdisciplinary; Community Engagement; Sustainability Research (Energy; Ecological & Environmental Change; Food Systems; Built Environment & Communities; Water). 01/16/2023 - 06/30/2033. Total project budget: $160,000,000. Successful first round application, invited full proposal development. Withdrawn.
Comments: This proposal was developed May-June 2022. It was successful as a Tier 2 grant in the first round of applications and the group, with me as PI, was invited to submit a full proposal by Jan. 2023. The University of Utah could only sponsor one full proposal, however, and chose to sponsor a different proposal. This meant we had to withdraw our application or find an outside sponsor and move the funding outside the University of Utah, which we ultimately declined to do.

Training in University Teaching:

As a Teaching Fellow in political science at Syracuse University, through the national Future Professoriate Project, I participated in a seminar on university teaching. The year-long seminar (2002-2003) included lectures, group seminar discussions, and the development of a personal teaching portfolio. As part of the seminar each Fellow also developed a university course under the supervision of a senior faculty member. In the years following the active year as a Teaching Fellow I continued to be involved by following the university wide lecture series on university teaching that was arranged by the Future Professoriate Project at Syracuse. Having completed the Teaching Fellow requirements I was eligible to receive a certificate in university teaching from Syracuse University.

New Course Development:

- | | |
|---|---|
| • Case Writing Workshop | • Administrative Theory |
| • Crisis Management | • Ethics for Public Administrators |
| • Crisis Management and Conflict Resolution | • Governance and the Economy |
| • Policy Analysis | • Governance and the Economy On-line course |
| • Policy Analysis On-line course | • MPA Capstone – the Washington Seminar |

I developed the curriculum and reader of course materials together with a senior faculty member.

- | | |
|---|--|
| • Public Administration – General introduction | • Management and Organization – Human Resource Management |
| • Public Administration - Comparative Public Administration | • Administrative Reform – Public Sector Management |
| • Public Policy – General Introduction | • Local Administration – Local Administration and Decentralization Processes |
| • Public Policy – Policy Analysis | |
| • Management and Organization – Introduction | |

I developed the curriculum and selected the reading materials for all of these courses on behalf of Leiden University. Together the courses make up the first year of courses for the two-year Master's program in public administration at the University of Saana, Yemen. The target group/students are senior public servants studying part-time.

Development of Teaching Materials:

"Crisis Management – PSC 400/600, PAF 400, SOS 600"

This is the course reader for a mixed upper level undergraduate and graduate student course. The course is interdisciplinary in its content and was cross-listed as political science, social science, and sociology. The course reader contains all the material the students needed for the course with the exception of an additional book that the students selected from a list, read and reviewed. I had primary responsibility for designing the course and selecting the course readings, while the course itself was co-taught.

“PPA 996 – Case Writing Workshop”

This is a course reader and case writing guide for Master’s students in public administration. The reader is designed as a step-by-step guide to writing and presenting case studies of crisis management. This structured guide to case study research was developed to eliminate a program bottleneck created by the large numbers of student failing to complete their Master’s thesis. The reader contains a selection of articles addressing specific aspects of crisis research, group dynamic analysis and leadership studies. The first edition of the reader was developed by two senior faculty members at Syracuse University. The following two editions I updated and modified based on the experience of teaching the course for several semesters.
